

MY NAME IS EMILY CLARK, AND I AM RUNNING FOR TREASURER OF STUDENT COUNCIL...

Hi

Do You Know Me? You Will!

I am the daughter of two world renowned economists, and I believe a studied application of neo-Malthusian principles to the current economic conditions at Clark University, combined with a learned acknowledgement of the validity of Rostow's stages of economic maturity, will result in the economic revival that everyone desires of Clark. It is no secret that the Undergraduate Student Council is run according to a liberalistic centralization of government power. The Student Activities Fund is little more than a mandatory state-levied tax on its citizens. Each organization vies for approval of the Council members, who arbitrarily redirect the flow of resources to those with the most political representation. Applying an Engelian conception of a natural economic state, one recognizes Council as little more than a financial baby-sitter, designed to keep the student body from achieving its personal aims in an efficient and practical manner. This is not the role of government, and it is time for a change.

If elected this March, my first act in office will be to withdraw the entire sum of the SAF, and distribute it from the back of a dump truck in Red Square with pitchforks. Thank you.

EVEN

MORE

ROC-U

FILLER

(ENJOY IT

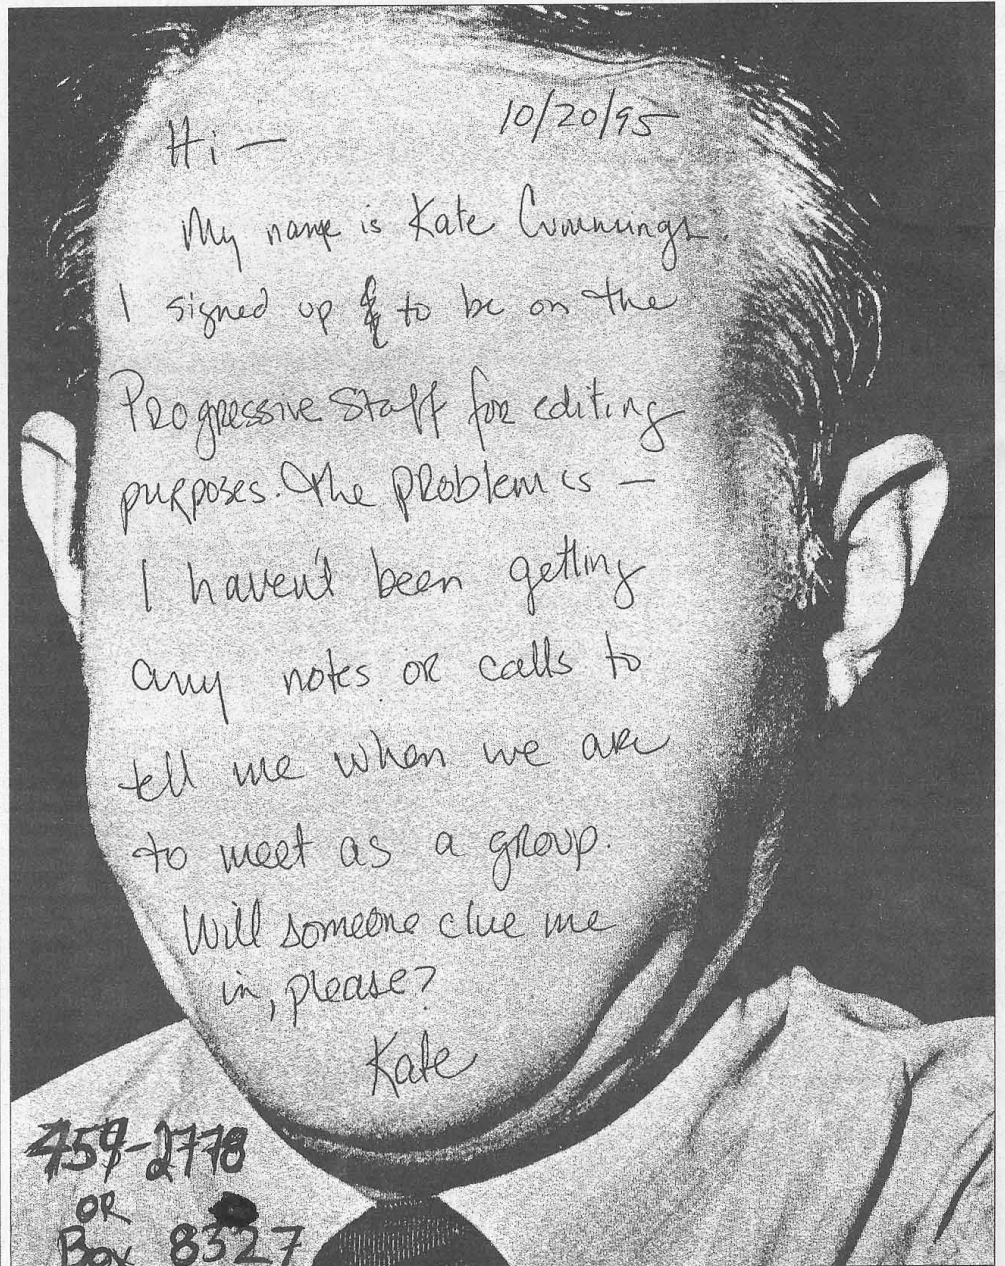

WHILE IT LASTS!):

"Bully for ROC-U!"

sez

Someone You Admire

R.I.P. the Progressive

Wheat Bread's Good Deed of the Month:

Colleges and universities across North America are mobilizing now in preparation of a March 14 National Day of Action. More than 40 campus and community organizers from the United States and Canada will be marching on Washington to share their vision of a multiracial and inclusive democracy. This march will address several issues, including access to education, Affirmative Action, financial aid, and immigrants' rights.

The Center for Campus Organizing is working on this project. If you would like more information on either the march or details of the legislation in question, please write Wheat Bread at box B-22.